We found at least half of them. I hope to find out about the other half this coming week. Whoever the other vendor(s) is(are), they also took down our hardware. All these versions of different banners are on new hardware; the banner vendors are realizing great profits on our current situation. It breaks my heart to think that BID assessments will now have to be re-spent on banners just to return us to where we were. We are much smaller than the City and such mistakes impact us much more severely. I'd have hoped that the person handling these banner permits would have been a little more thoughtful, but there I go digressing again. We'll just hold our noses and get through this. Thanks for all of your help Nate.

Ok, sounds good. Did you find your banners yet?

I was thinking Nate, that it might be good for me and George Livermore to review the motion that was prepared establishing the WTC BID's exclusive use of the street light poles in the District before it's introduced. Let's be double sure we don't have any mistakes and that it covers all of the poles in the BID area. If you send it to me I'll run it by George and get it back to you within 1 day.

Does that make sense to you?
